

Looking for a way to practice that old adage “show don’t tell”? Here’s a description exercise from John Gardner’s book The Art of Fiction. “Describe someone whose wretched, terrible spouse of fifty years has just died. Without mentioning the death, have your main character go outside and describe the landscape that she/he sees.”

Elite Literary Book Group
Advanced Academic Training